一、英语股票投资对话

Q: Good morning! A: Good morning. Can I help you? Q: Yes, I'm holding some shares of PICC. I want to know some present information about the company. A: You know, last Monday, an earthquake broke. Chinese insurance firms have paid 1.7 million yuan in earthquake-related claims as of May 14. But, nobody knows what the total damages will be. This payment will drag down the company's earnings indeed. As a result, these company's stock may go down as investors expected in short term. Q: You mean I should sell the shares I hold? A: In my opinion, if you want to invest in long term, you can wait to see. China Life Insurance Co. and Ping An, the nation's biggest insurers, have yet to extend their reach across China, where only 4 percent of the nation's 1.3 billion people have insurance, according to data compiled by KPMG International. The insurance penetration in China is generally very low. Since the snowstorm disasters and the earthquake, Chinese people are becoming more aware of insurance. It's favorable for Chinese insurance's long-term development. If you want to gain the long-term profit, you can just hold on. Q: The earthquake made so huge damage, will it destroy the macro economy then? Sichuan is a big province in terms of population and agriculture output but its share in China's total industrial and manufacturing output is relatively small. Thus, though the quake is an enormous human tragedy, its impact on China's economic growth to be temporary and limited. Probably the largest macro impact is raising the upside risks to China's inflation outlook in the near term. The government may make a series of measures to reduce the inflation, which may affect the finance market a lot. Q: What about the non-ferrous metal price? Investors bet that China's power shortages could be aggravated by damage to dams and the grid by the recent earthquake, leading to lower supplies. Aluminium prices rose back above the key ,000-a-tonne level last Friday. 借鉴内容：\*://zhidao.baidu.com/question/54103486.html
